SILVER'S ROSEATE OUTLOOK

THAT a bi-metallic system will be adopted by all countries after the war is growing more evident daily. The production of silver is enormously increasing, due to the vast output of useful metals of whose ores it is a by-product, notably those of copper. Yet even the recent order for 400,000,000 pounds of copper did not disturb silver in its ascending course. With six-bits almost in sight, there are those who forecast as high as a dollar an ounce or more when the war is terminated.

The nations embroiled must give some tangible evidence of their ability to pay not only their staggering debts of war but their bills encountered during the period of rehabilitation, which will extend for decades, possibly centuries. There have been war credits extended, but peace credits will also be needed, and sorely needed. The pinch of poverty will come when arms have been laid down and the pact signed. There will be no longer any ulterior motive for neutral nations to lend money to the powers that are now at war, nor will patriotism appeal to the people who are paying enormous taxes for the purpose of continuing the conflict. It will become necessary for the nations of devastated Europe to give other than promises to pay for what they purchase, and it remains for silver coinage to fill the gap, for it is impossible to raise the price of gold in order to increase its production. The price of gold has been and must continue to be unchanging, otherwise all other methods of valuation would be thrown at naught. But, accepting gold as the standard of valuation, the ratio of silver may and will fluctuate until the nations agree upon a standardization, which will probably be 20 to 1, or about a dollar an ounce. Once established by a concert of the powers, this will be a permanent ratio.

The natural question arises: How will the nations, now so heavily in debt, be enabled to pay for the white metal after the war? The answer is simple. Canada, with its Cobalt reserves, will by means of its exportations be in a position to assume the portion of the war debt that Great Britain will cast upon it. Mexico, after its own turmoil, will thereby find a means to rehabilitate itself. The United States will make a demand upon Europe for the return of foreign held securities in exchange for the silver exported. Even with the sending of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of securities in settlement of the balance in trade, the European countries, particularly Great Britain, still have other hundreds of millions of dollars invested in American industries in the form of stocks and bonds. These must be sacrificed for the purchase of our silver, even if it means their confiscation by the government.

Silver must be had or rehabilitation cannot take place. In its purchase the United States will regain all the securities that it has sent abroad and will retain within its own country the huge sums that have hitherto been sent abroad in the form of interest and dividends.

NEED A GOOD ROADS DAY

ESMERALDA prides itself on the good road work that has been done under the supervision of the officers of that county, but if the recent destruction of a fairly good piece of roadway between Millers and Crow Springs is a sample of what the Goldfield boosters achieve in the vicinity of Tonopah it were better that they should refrain from interfering with the natural surface of the desert. This is supposed to be the new road between the new mining camp and the milling center of Millers on which Esmeralda county spent several thousand dollars last year. In the opinion of many autoists the stretch is a disgrace to any community and the suggestion to call this section part of the Midland Trail is sufficient to drive travel away from the southern route. If many such stretches were found on the Midland or any other trail the route would soon exist only in memory. Some generous persons pardon the omission for the reason they believe the road supervisor of Esmeralda must believe the section is in this county and that Millers is a suburb of Tonopah. This specimen of road engineering is strictly within the limits of Esmeralda county, which appears indifferent to the necessity for doing something to help the new mining camps to make a record by reducing the cost of transportation. The Orizaba Mining company is giving a good example of the proper way to build a good road capable of surviving the spring and winter storms. This company is grading a new road from the mine to the Republic summit and also dragging the old road to the Sodaville road junction. When this road is finished it will give a good, solid, hard rock bottomed road for all through travel to Cloverdale, Golden, Lone and Reese River. This road will not be affected by the melting snows in spring.

QUALIFICATIONS THAT ARE NEEDED

THERE are those who may complain of Justice Hughes for his laying bare the vulnerable portions of the anatomy of the administration and scathingly flaying them. In fact, there are such critics. But in so doing the Republican candidate for the presidency but manifests that this is not a campaign of pussyfootedness, at least so far as his party is concerned. What the country called for and what it got was a man of strength and courage, one who had the ability and the intent to right wrongs and effect reforms, one who would not fear to call a spade a spade even if he found it sitting on a throne.

Justice Hughes is the man needed for the duties of the hour, duties that require a strong and fearless man, one who wears spikes on his shoes, rather than rubber soles.

In "semi-civilized New Jersey," where Woodrow Wilson hails from, the state maintains a prison embodying a bathhouse erected at a cost of some hundreds of thousands which is used only three months of the year, during the good old summer time, as the warden thinks prisoners "would take cold" bathing in winter. This is the observation of Warden Osborne, of Sing Sing.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN TESTIFIES TO THE MERITS OF MANHATTAN MAN

J. S. Kelly, of Manhattan, is one of the numerous admirers of Arthur Putney, Republican candidate for the assembly, and he does not hesitate to express his sentiments openly. On Saturday evening he took occasion to address the audience at the picture show in Manhattan in the following terms:

Ladies and gentlemen: After over 50 years I am honored by the people of the great battle born state of Nevada to make them a short address, not because I am an eloquent speaker, but because I am an old civil war veteran. At this time, when most of the great countries of Europe are at war and the great question of preparedness is before the people, it shows the great spirit of Americanism by the honor they wish to bestow on an old civil war veteran. We have before us a great national campaign. It is only just that we should ignore our petty feelings and our individual disappointments and remain loyal to our party and our principles. It is vain for any man to believe that he is above his party. I do not believe that any American ever won a wreath of laurels or any prestige or capital by the political insolvency of his opponent. Whatever has been my feeling in this matter, I wish to state now that I intend to bury the past and to work in my humble way for the interests of my party, and for the interests of the people. Dear friends, I wish to thank you all for the kind consideration you have shown me in the past. In our town we have been favored with one candidate for the assembly, Arthur Putney. I shall vote for him. I would kindly ask my friends to do the same. The justice office is a non-partisan office, made so by law. I would ask my friends, regardless of their party, to vote for whoever they think is the most deserving man. I am an old man, and poor, but the great ending is always a tragedy, whether it comes in a palace or a hovel, but I feel that the political prestige and wealth of the whole world would balance but lightly against my own self respect and honor.

I think we have been fortunate in our choice of our great national candidates, Charles E. Hughes and Charles H. Fairbanks. Their record of the past is a splendid assurance of their future. In Hughes we find a man possessed of the statesmanship of a Blaine or a Cleveland, with the executive ability of a Richelieu, and with the loving kindness and domestic simplicity of the great Russian philosopher, Tolstoi. On the other hand, our Democratic friends have for their leader a very learned and polished gentleman, but a man who is very weak and undecided in all of his undertakings, who has built for his party and his followers a bridge of glass, which he walks upon over a river of political ruin.

AT GYPSY QUEEN

The station set at Gypsy Queen has been completed and within a few days the 1500 foot crosscut will be started in the direction of the ore cut at 1470 feet in the shaft and presumably the same ledge opened in the winze from the 1350 level.

TWO SERVICES HEREAFTER
 Rev. Harlan Bailey, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, left this morning for Manhattan, where he will hold services, and will continue on to Round Mountain tomorrow, returning to Tonopah on Thursday. Hitherto there has been only one service in the church each Sunday because Rev. Bailey had to also fill the pulpit at Goldfield, but the arrival of a minister in that city will enable him to hold two services in Tonopah each Sunday.

NORTH STAR PRODUCTION
 Several days ago the North Star sent 50 tons of ore to mill. It has 75 tons additional in the bins to be forwarded at once. This ore runs between $30 and $40 to the ton and is being extracted from the oxidized vein that was recently discovered, which stratified and was picked up. It now shows every indication of permanency.
